Agreed. It would be a stretch to say the trucks barricading the streets and the air horns blaring at whatever decibels for however many days constitute the use of force. But I do take his general point, and yours as well. I hope it ends with a whimper.

I hear there has been a task force stood up to look at it as an NS matter. Good to hear that it is being considered in that way, even if on the ground it doesn't come to it.

Good to chat w/ you too. Happy I picked up. Sorry it was short...

The key bit in the below is "... the use ... of force..." ... Presence <> force or we should be talking the same thing about all sorts of other occupations around the country.

I'm all about a resolution to this and a forceful one with us victorious but, from the facts on the ground, I don't know we're there, except in a small small number of cases and then, yes, throw the book at them.
